

Homeschooling Parent Mentoring Services

As a teacher, my mindset is always attuned to ways to make things more authentic, purposeful and connected. I like to help ease worries, answer questions, offer guidance, and help homeschooling parents through their homeschooling experience. I come from a traditional educational background having taught for 10 years in the private and public sector. But, as a homeschooling mom myself, I've also researched and learned much about the way people naturally learn. In studying many different styles, I've found worthwhile aspects of Montessori, Charlotte Mason, Classical Education, Unschooling, and TJEEd, that I can apply to all types of strategies.

Some areas of focus include:

- finding your homeschool style
- finding your teaching style
- establishing a mission and goals
- deschooling
- integration of content areas
- natural learning and how to record it
- encouragement
- year plans
- lesson plans

My ultimate goal is to guide homeschool parents through the process of getting off the “conveyor belt” mindset of mass education, and focus on how best to work with your own child in your particular environment. This enables parents to be successful and confident about how their child's education is progressing.

I'm here to provide guidance and support. If you're interested to know more, please contact me and we'll figure out how I can best help you meet your goals.

I consult personally within a 15-mile radius of Pasadena, Ca (or sometimes online or by phone).
