

Was there anything that you found insightful or profound in the book?

Did you find the ending satisfying? What would you change, if you didn't?

If you could ask the author a question, what would you ask?

Has this novel changed you?

What main theme or message do you think the author was trying to get across to the reader?

Could you relate to the characters? Why or why not?

How do the events in the story reveal the author's world view?

Did certain parts of the book make you uncomfortable? Why?

In a movie version, who would play the different characters?

In thinking about the choices the characters made, how would you have chosen? The same? Different?

Are there any ways in which the story is similar or can be compared to events today?

What character did you like the most? Why?

What character did you like the least? Why?

Did the book evoke any emotions? Explain.

When did you decide you liked/disliked the book?

If you could change the ending of the book, would you?

If you could change anything about the book, would you?

What did you think of the author's writing style?

Do you think that the characters were realistic? Did they reflect how you would have portrayed him/her/them?

How would the book have been different if it were set in today's world?

Why do you think people consider this book a classic?

Would you recommend this book to others?

What do you think happens to the characters after the book?

Did the book remind you of any other books? Explain.

Did your opinion of the book change as you read it?

What did you learn/take away from this book?

Who do you think the author intended to read this book and why?

If you could only save one character from the book in the event of a disaster, which one would it be and why?

Would you choose any of the characters in the book to be your friend?
Why?

Which character do you identify with the most?

If you were to play one of the characters, which would you prefer to be?

What event, scene, moment stood out the most to you? Why?